Brand strategy: suggestions from Nathan:

1. Channel / content strategy
2. increase OMI quality members
3. Focused 1 - 3 initiatives forward (e.g. gltf)

Other points:

- messaging and resource alignment

Next steps according to Nathan.

1. glTF extension infrastructure Q1, Q2, set a KPI of a fun project to be worked on and completed.
Like the sky box or face tracking or omi-notes agent.
 - re-visit glTF readme about approval stages.
 - how many implementations of OMI proposed extensions?
 - how many users of projects?
Are these sensible questions to ask? What we want to get is a heatmap of engagement. How do we measure the sentiment of glTF (or wider OMI) without focusing on the tech.
Clicks or views?
--- accessible hook that can serve as a marketing campaign, that then has a secondary goal. e.g. a "press this button" site showcasing a site click spec, or a pixel war (or the 3D equivalent)
2. decide second infrastructure goal. Create a list for people to suggest others...

two approaches: 1. a stage for people to dream of something together

2. a more formal way to support e.g. standards, omi-assisted community member initiative.

need to be clear about which is which

"look at what former active members who are more passive now, could need to come back." - idea to have constructive interviews about what they get excited about. no commitment for anything.
