Discussion about participation - supporter vs active contributor. If someone wants to be in more of a 'supporter' role that is more passive, perhaps there is a process/role they can take in which they define their ability to support, i.e., I will be a 'passive' watcher of this issue/group -- while in other subgroups, they may take a more 'active contributor' role.

@mrmetaverse arrived and gave an overview of github project kanban functionality:

- added "Review" column before "Done"
- Suggested format: "As a [role], I need [task] so that [reason for task]"
example: "As a MSF delegate, I need to have a bot installed so that I am reminded of our upcoming events"
- Can create task lists by using markdown example:
  - ☒ task 1
  - ☐ task 2
  - ☐ task 3
- Can convert a comment into a task (hit 3 dots next to comment)
- His 'favorite thing of all' is milestones ("Reference in new issue")
- Can set dependencies by using sub-tasks
- Can keep track of dates by using MILESTONES
