via funksoup:

Hi again OMI folks -- Some sad news: our colleague @codefrau Vanessa Freudenberg, co-founder & chief architect @ Croquet, author of SqueakJS, and more -- passed away 2 weeks ago. As her Croquet co-founder Yoshiki Ohshima said, "One thing we can do in this circumstance is to carry the torch. the legacy she left, such as the Croquet reflector and library, and other software such as SqueakJS are available as open source. We can use them, and promote them and give credit to her when we do so."

From another post, "Even more tragically, the loss was by suicide. Vanessa had moved back to her country of origin, Germany back in June of this year. She did not leave Los Angeles because she wanted to, but because of the hate and terror of this current administration. She no longer felt safe in the US and made the difficult decision to go back to her home town...We believe that community was an important part of Vanessa's survival and that forced loss of community is a form of violence that has been inflicted upon many, especially right now."

Her github and website: <https://github.com/codefrau> and <https://www.freudenbergs.de/vanessa/>

In loving memory

Vanessa Freudenberg

funksoup attended the industrial metaverse MSF working group. Similar challenges to us, lack of resources and volunteers. They're moving to short term (1-2 months) projects as research.
